Proposition G will strengthen our democracy by creating civically engaged citizens. Young adults between the ages of 18 to 24 have the lowest voter turnout of any age group in the United States. Allowing young people to establish the habit of voting at an age when they're more likely to vote could help increase overall voter turnout.

Sixteen- and seventeen-year-olds have been at the forefront of important movements like the Black Lives Matter protests and the March for our Lives. They understand how policies impact them and their communities, and it's time they get to cast ballots that truly make a difference in their lives.

When we've expanded our democracy, we have strengthened our nation. We've removed barrier after barrier to voting -- gender, race, economic capacity and literacy. Today, Proposition G is the right answer to young people seeking to voice their views on public matters. Our democracy works best when more people participate. It is time that we extend voting rights to 16- and 17-year-olds for school board and other local elections.

We know that voting is a habit and that age 16 is a better time than 18 to establish the habit of lifelong participation in the democratic process. Sixteen and 17 year old citizens already vote in local elections in four Maryland cities and in countries around the world including Scotland, Austria, Argentina, Brazil, and Ecuador. In those places, 16- and 17-year-olds have turned out to vote at higher rates than other young or first-time voters, demonstrating it is the right time to build the habit of voting.

Sixteen- and 17-year-olds in San Francisco are knowledgeable and engaged in the political process like never before. Their daily lives are directly affected by the decisions our local elected officials make regarding schools, parks, buses, healthcare facilities and criminal justice.

Not all who are eligible will register or be inclined to vote -- just like with those over 18. But many will and their faith in the political process should be met with the ability to vote in local elections.

Generation Citizen, a non-profit organization that promotes youth civic engagement in San Francisco and across the nation, urges you to Vote Yes on Proposition G.

Across the country, young people of color - Black, Asian, Pacific Islander, Latinx, and Native - are the rising majority and at the forefront of leading bold change. In our state, 1 in 3 Californians are millennials, and 7 in 10 millennials are people of color. As the most diverse generation in California, young people in San Francisco are ready to have voting power so their voice is heard at the ballot box. As organizations working directly with San Francisco's youth and young voters, we know that 16 and 17 year olds are just as capable, intelligent, and passionate as adults when it comes to making decisions about their schools and communities. Supporting this measure is the opportunity to put learning into practice and increase the voting rates of young voters. Giving 16 and 17 year olds the right to vote will result in more equitable education policies and more accountable elected leaders.

Voting is the cornerstone of democracy and vital to our future— we must do everything we can to encourage the vote of young people and support the lifelong habit of voting.

Young people have become leaders on issues like the climate crisis, public education, affordable housing, police brutality, and racism. Voting YES on Proposition G will allow young people to participate in local public policy making and have a say in their future.

Our city is behind the curve when it comes to this issue. Nearly half of the states in the country already allow 17-year-olds to participate in elections.

The San Francisco Berniecrats works to advance a progressive agenda— this includes reforming our electoral process and ending voter suppression. We are proud to organize and support the vote of young people throughout our nation. Proposition G will ensure we expand participation and increase turnout in our democratic process.

Vote yes on Proposition G.

Brandon Harami, Chair, SF Berniecrats
