Article 34 of the California Constitution is a racist stain in our state's history, narrowly passed in 1950 with the backing of segregationists to block affordable housing and exclude Black tenants. It still stands today.

Prop K is a step towards removing this racist legacy and authorizing the creation of up to 10,000 additional units of permanently affordable housing in San Francisco.

There is no cost to taxpayers for authorizing these new homes.

Prop K also authorizes the creation of municipal social housing. This is a form of permanently affordable housing for public good, charging low rents and housing a broad range of incomes, pioneered in Vienna and other major cities. Social housing is an important and innovative strategy to address displacement and homelessness.

San Francisco must continue to move forward to reverse the displacement of people of color from our city and reduce the cost of housing so that working people can afford to live here. Prop K is an important step in this direction and is supported by the full Board of Supervisors.

|  | Article 34 of the California Constitution is a racist stain in our state's history, narrowly passed in 1950 with the backing of segregationists to block affordable housing and exclude Black tenants. It still stands today. Prop K is a step towards removing this racist legacy and authorizing the creation of up to 10,000 additional units of permanently affordable housing in San Francisco. There is no cost to taxpayers for authorizing these new homes. Prop K also authorizes the creation of municipal social housing. This is a form of permanently affordable housing for public good, charging low rents and housing a broad range of incomes, pioneered in Vienna and other major cities. Social housing is an important and innovative strategy to address displacement and homelessness. San Francisco must continue to move forward to reverse the displacement of people of color from our city and reduce the cost of housing so that working people can afford to live here.
