	CITY LEADERS AGREE ON THE OVERPAID EXECUTIVE TAX

The Pandemic isn't over. Cities around the country are preparing for another spike in the curve by stocking up on medical equipment and hiring nurses, doctors, first responders, and other essential healthcare workers. San Francisco needs to be ready.

Prop L is expected to raise over $140 million every year which would allow the City to hire hundreds of nurses, doctors, and first responders.

The tax is simple. If the measure passes, any large corporation that pays their top executive 100 times more than their average worker will have a 0.1% surcharge added to their annual business tax payment. The more inequity between the top executive and their workers, the higher the surcharge.

Corporations can avoid the tax by simply paying their executives less or by raising their employees' wages.

We believe that big corporations that can afford to pay their executives million-dollar salaries every year can afford to pay their fair share in taxes to help us recover. Over the last 30 years, executive salaries in the United States have skyrocketed by 940%. But regular workers' salaries have grown by just 11%. Prop L incentivizes companies to invest in their workers, not just their executives.

Prop L is a consensus measure with broad base support. Please join us in voting for Prop L.

CITY LEADERS AGREE ON THE OVERPAID EXECUTIVE TAX

The Pandemic isn't over. Cities around the country are preparing for another spike in the curve by stocking up on medical equipment and hiring nurses, doctors, first responders, and other essential healthcare workers. San Francisco needs to be ready.

Prop L is expected to raise over $140 million every year which would allow the City to hire hundreds of nurses, doctors, and first responders.

The tax is simple. If the measure passes, any large corporation that pays their top executive 100 times more than their average worker will have a 0.1% surcharge added to their annual business tax payment. The more inequity between the top executive and their workers, the higher the surcharge.

Corporations can avoid the tax by simply paying their executives less or by raising their employees' wages.

We believe that big corporations that can afford to pay their executives million-dollar salaries every year can afford to pay their fair share in taxes to help us recover. Over the last 30 years, executive salaries in the United States have skyrocketed by 940%. But regular workers' salaries have grown by just 11%. Prop L incentivizes companies to invest in their workers, not just their executives.

Prop L is a consensus measure with broad base support. Please join us in voting for Prop L.

The Pandemic isn't over. Cities around the country are preparing for another spike in the curve by stocking up on medical equipment and hiring nurses, doctors, first responders, and other essential healthcare workers. San Francisco needs to be ready.

Prop L is expected to raise over $140 million every year which would allow the City to hire hundreds of nurses, doctors, and first responders.

The tax is simple. If the measure passes, any large corporation that pays their top executive 100 times more than their average worker will have a 0.1% surcharge added to their annual business tax payment. The more inequity between the top executive and their workers, the higher the surcharge.

Corporations can avoid the tax by simply paying their executives less or by raising their employees' wages.

We believe that big corporations that can afford to pay their executives million-dollar salaries every year can afford to pay their fair share in taxes to help us recover. Over the last 30 years, executive salaries in the United States have skyrocketed by 940%. But regular workers' salaries have grown by just 11%. Prop L incentivizes companies to invest in their workers, not just their executives.

Prop L is a consensus measure with broad base support. Please join us in voting for Prop L.

	CITY LEADERS AGREE ON THE OVERPAID EXECUTIVE TAX
	The Pandemic isn't over. Cities around the country are preparing for another spike in the curve by stocking up on medical equipment and hiring nurses, doctors, first responders, and other essential healthcare workers. San Francisco needs to be ready.
	Prop L is expected to raise over $140 million every year which would allow the City to hire hundreds of nurses, doctors, and first responders.
	The tax is simple. If the measure passes, any large corporation that pays their top executive 100 times more than their average worker will have a 0.1% surcharge added to their annual business tax payment. The more inequity between the top executive and their workers, the higher the surcharge.
	Corporations can avoid the tax by simply paying their executives less or by raising their employees' wages.
	We believe that big corporations that can afford to pay their executives million-dollar salaries every year can afford to pay their fair share in taxes to help us recover. Over the last 30 years, executive salaries in the United States have skyrocketed by 940%. But regular workers' salaries have grown by just 11%. Prop L incentivizes companies to invest in their workers, not just their executives.

	CITY LEADERS AGREE ON THE OVERPAID EXECUTIVE TAX
	The Pandemic isn't over. Cities around the country are preparing for another spike in the curve by stocking up on medical equipment and hiring nurses, doctors, first responders, and other essential healthcare workers. San Francisco needs to be ready.
	Prop L is expected to raise over $140 million every year which would allow the City to hire hundreds of nurses, doctors, and first responders.
	The tax is simple. If the measure passes, any large corporation that pays their top executive 100 times more than their average worker will have a 0.1% surcharge added to their annual business tax payment. The more inequity between the top executive and their workers, the higher the surcharge.
	Corporations can avoid the tax by simply paying their executives less or by raising their employees' wages.
	We believe that big corporations that can afford to pay their executives million-dollar salaries every year can afford to pay their fair share in taxes to help us recover. Over the last 30 years, executive salaries in the United States have skyrocketed by 940%. But regular workers' salaries have grown by just 11%.
